1. I-participle ± auxiliary

1.1 Grammatical category

- form: separate paradigms

perfect		re-narrated		conclusive
	aorist		aorist		imperfect
1Sg	pisal sám		pisal sám	pišel sám	pisal sám
3Sg	pisal e		pisal Ø	pišel Ø	pisal e
1Pl	pisali sme		pisali sme	pišeli sme	pisali sme
3Pl	pisali sa		pisali Ø	pišeli Ø	pisali sa

Table 1: homonymous forms (e.g. Nicolova 2008, SBE 1999)

- meaning: ‘re-narrated’; but cf. (1)–(2)

- (1) a. Spored informacijata na 26 avgust ekspertite sa razgledali doklad za Ekologična ocenka. (www.dnevnik.bg, 28.8.2009)
'According to the information, on August 26 the experts have examined an environmental assessment report.'
- b. V nedelja v predavaneto [...] liderăt na 'Ataka' V. S. objavi, če Ch. e sâbiral glasove za RZS v Slivensko i Starozagorsko. (www.dnevnik.bg, 22.12.09)
'On Sunday in the TV show [...], the leader of 'Ataka', V. S., announced that Ch. had collected votes for RZS [Party Red, Zakonnost i Spravedlivost] in the districts of Sliven and Stara Zagora.'
- (2) – Čuchte li novinata? – izvika Mark Avrelij [...]
– Kakva novina? – obadichme se vsički.
– Baj Ganju se vârnal ot Evropa!
– Ne može da bâde!
– Kak „ne može da bâde“, be, gospoda, az go vidjach, govorich s nego. [...] (Aleko Konstantinov, Baj Ganju, 82)
– Have you heard the news? – shouted Mark Avrelij.
– Which news? – we all said.
– Baj Ganju returned from Europe!
– Impossible!
– How, “impossible”, I have seen him, talked to him.

1.2 Discourse category

- form: generalised paradigm

	confirmative	neutral	non-confirmed
present	—	pravi	—
aorist	pravi	pravil (e)	—
imperfect	praveše	pravel (e)	—
pluperfect	—	beše pravil	bil (e) pravil

Table 2: generalized/neutral past (Friedman 2001, Alexander 2001); perfektopodoben kompleks (Ivančev 1988)

- function: discourse based

- non-confirmativity as chief contextual variant of –aux (Friedman 2001, ...)
- relation to discourse mode (Fielder 1995, 1999, ...)

direct	indefinite	indirect
Aorist event structure	+aux	–aux narrative structure

Table 3: ±aux and discourse mode (e.g. Fielder 1995)

⇒ discourse-conditioned auxiliary variation

2. Discourse

„[T]he value of any given form depends upon the context, that is on the value of the other forms with which it co-occurs.” (Fielder 1997: 171)

⇒ interaction of verb form: narrative planes

‘The narrative [narrative plane, B.S.] is a text-forming system in which aspecto-temporal forms interact to express actions which are posterior, anterior, simultaneous or subsequent to each other.’ (Marovska 2005: 102)¹

- Mutafčiev (1964)
 - plane of visualisation: historical present
 - plane of reminiscence: aorist
- Ivančev (1988)
 - witnessed narrative: aorist + imperfect
 - non-witnessed narrative: perfektopodoben kompleks (perfect, re-narrated, conclusive)
- Marovska (2005)
 - neutral narrative: historical present
 - witnessed narrative: aorist
 - distanced narrative: perfect

¹ It is not clear how this relates to other discourse modes such as description or argument (cf. Smith 2003).

- Čakărova (2004)
 - plane of vizualisation: historical present
hidden narrator; reader observes event
 - plane of reminiscence: aorist
omniscient narrator, positioned between event and reader
 - plane of inference: conclusive aorist (+aux)
narrator infers events from the sphere of the past
 - plane of re-narration: renarrated forms (–aux)
lack of actualization; distanced from narrator and reader

- choice of narrative plane

“[T]he availability of synonymous narrative variants in the preterit sphere gives the narrator an opportunity to choose between various narrative strategies and, hence, achieve the desired effect on the recipient. [...] However, there is a certain condition that determines the choice of the narrative plane – it should be in compliance with the specific features of the given style and genre. In other words the author’s position in the preferred plane [...] should be justified in the context of a given genre [...]” (Čakărova 2004)

⇒ important role of narrative plane and genre (cf. also, e.g., Fielder 1997, 2001; Zambova 2000)

- –aux in different genres

(3) fairytale

(Zlatnoto ptice, <http://slovo.bg/showwork.php3?AulD=16&WorkID=437&Level=1>, 27.8.2011)

‘Once upon a time there was a king. In his garden grew a golden apple tree. Every day at noon the tree bloomed, in the evening it gave fruits and the fruits ripened, but somebody came and collected them. Every morning, the king went into the garden and did not find a single apple.’

(4) short-story

(Elin Pelin, Na onja svyat, 77)

‘When the news spread in the village, that grandfather Matejko had died – nobody believed it, because he loved to make jokes, but something like this had not happened to him before. But when grandmother Jova told about his last hour, everybody was convinced, that this time he was not joking. The man had returned from the woods, had unloaded his donkey, had tied it, had given it some hay and when he had stepped into his house, and had sat by the fire and had lit his pipe, a cutting pain had went through his body, he had laid down, had started to groan and’

(5) oral narration

'A city bus in Pernik flew without brakes in the steepest part of the town for several minutes. The driver managed to drive the uncontrollable vehicle into a heap of sand and save the passengers from a bloody drama. Two women are injured in the shocking stunt.'

The drama happened yesterday in the evening close to the Specialised Hospital [...] "Profilaktorium".

After several passengers boarded bus No. 1 at the terminal stop it drove down towards the centre. The street has a steep incline and right at the dangerous section the brakes of the 20-year old bus failed to work. The driver broke out in panic, but managed to see a heap of sand at the end of the pavement and rammed the vehicle into it. During that maneuver, the bus almost fell over and stopped in an almost vertical position. One of the injured persons is a physician and has three broken ribs.'

- usage and interpretation

- as expected in (3), i.e. non-actualization, not quite as expected in (4)-(6)
- 'non-witnessed' genre (3) — 'witnessed' genre (6)

⇒ common feature? usage condition?

3. Discourse function

- usage patterns of –aux on the discourse level

3.1 Distance

- Fielder (e.g. 1995, 2000; cf. also Chvany 1988)
 - distance narrator – narration
 - –aux: foregrounding of narration
 - +aux: foregrounding of narrator

'Teenagers from Stara Zagora beat up a car driver and threw him out of his car. After that, they drove on and left the car in the city. The action took place on the ring road at the junction to the village Xrišteni during the weekend at around 22:00 o'clock, but has been announced by the police only today.

The bold bandits, who travelled by car, rammed from behind the 'Reno Laguna' that was parked in front of them. They angrily got off the car, threw the 26 year-old driver from the village Dălboki out of his 'Reno', and drove his car towards the city.'

→ e stanał: narrator steps in to orient the reader, off-plotline (e.g. Fludernik 1991)

- omniscient narrator with –Aux (cf. (6), (7)):

„This interpretation [...] is possible because third person omniscient narration results in the coding of the category of distance on a higher level of abstraction than the third person narration of a character.” (Fielder 1997: 96)

- proposal

- distance as perspectivisation
- auxiliary variation as shift of perspective from narrator to non-narrator
- interpretation of ‘non-narrator’ interacts with genre and context

3.2 Perspectivity

- perspectivity as relational concept (Graumann 2002): anchor (point of view), horizon (object), aspect (interpretation)
 - anchor: narrator, non-narrator, person, undefined
 - horizon: state of affairs
 - aspect: non-witnessed, narrated, foregrounded, ...
- different specifications of anchor/point of view
 - ±narrator: –narrator: anchor undefined
+narrator: anchor non-narrator or person
 - discourse level: narrative structure, subordinate structure

- (8) anchor: undefined

(Vasil Georgiev, Tri istorii za provala, 55)

'Everybody knows this story, in which Lora interviews Minister B. D. on the phone, and he said that about the fucking people. [...]

It was roughly that kind of nonsense that the minister spread in the interview, yet it proceeded within the limits of the decent aesthetics of a polite conversation. The reason was, that on the island Sveti Ivan, a team of archeologists detected a small marble sarcophagus with bones, which the same team declared as the remains of Saint Joan Predteča – cousin and godfather of our Savior Jesus Christ.'

- (9) anchor: non-narrator

(11) de re vs. de dicto in indirect speech (Sonnenhauser 2011b; Fielder 2000 on narrating vs. experiencing "I")

Makedonka razfasova măža si, kazva, če bil na rabota v Italija

M. T. from the Macedonian town Štip admitted that she had killed her husband Branko, who "disappeared" three years ago.'

⇒ change of perspective: narrative structuring of texts

4. Text-structuring

- usage of –aux in press reports
 - Zambova (2000): subjectification, colloquialisation
 - Levin-Steinmann (2004): commentary vs. narration
 - Fielder (2001): return to original pragmatic function (distance)
- no clear-cut rules, but: typical patterns

Table 4: narrative structure for (12)²

- structure:
 - aorist: main plotline
 - -aux: elaboration
 - present/+aux: orientation

⇒ oral narration (\pm aux) embedded in reports (aorist): change of narrative planes; typical structure for yellow press reports (cf. also (6) and (7))

² Embedded structures are left out.

5. To conclude

- auxiliary variation as perspectivising device
- interpretation depends on the role of the narrator
- application to other (possibly) perspectivising means: clitic doubling, tripartite article, embedding structures, etc. (cf. Sonnenhauser 2011a)
